THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1908.

The shortcomings of the many political aspirants furnish food for many "spirited" arguments.

Bids for three aeroplanes, ranging in price from $1,000 to $25,000, which must have a speed of at least 40 miles an hour, and carry two persons with a combined weight of 350 pounds and sufficient fuel for a flight of 125 miles have been accepted by the war department.

Postmaster General George Von L. Meyer believes that it is injurious to the health to sit at a desk, and consequently he uses a high desk at which he can stand. His desk, which was recently installed, is the speaker's desk from the old chamber of the house of representatives in the Massachusetts state house.

The Medford Daily Tribune has issued its first annual Horticultural Edition for 1908. It is in the nature of a magazine publication, printed on book paper and finely illustrated with half tone cuts. The entire resources of the Rogue River valley are fully covered and the edition contains numerous well written articles on the fruit, timber and mining industries of that section.

The week beginning September 21st will see the greatest livestock and race meeting at Portland that has been in that city since the Lewis & Clark Exposition in 1905. The gathering there last week, participated in by the Oregon Pure Bred Livestock Association and the North Pacific Fair Association, brought live steek men from all over the country, closing with a banquet at the Portland Commercial Club.

According to the plans of Swift & Company, Portland is to become the largest packing house center west of Kansas City. Actual work on the stockyards and plant is to begin within a few months. All arrangements with the railroad companies relative to spurs and sidetracks have been completed. The construction of these tracks is to begin at once. Work on the stockyards is to commence as the railroads finish the sidetracks to the pecking house site. The plant complete including wharfage for seagoing vessels, will cost something like $4,000,000.

With a double set of delegates to the Republican national convention in the field from Florida, selected by the warring officeholders and anti-administration factions at the split convention, each of which will fight for the seats at Chicago, political attention is becoming centered on the southern states. In every state of the "Solid South" a similar situation promises to develop. The significance of this cannot be overestimated, as upon the seating of contesting delegations may depend the republican nomination. With over two hundred seats from the southland in dispute when the convention meets and the states with double delegations ruled out of voting, it will be an easy matter for the field candidates against Secretary Taft, by combining to seat the anti-administration candidates. With the convention thus organized, Taft's chances, it is claimed by leading politicians, would go glimmering.
